S.F. ARTS FESTIVAL CHOOSES FORT MASON CENTER FOR SITE OF SATELLITE EXHIBIT

The 38th Annual S.F. Arts Festival will be held from Wednesday, August 1 through Sunday, August 5 in the Civic Center Plaza, Polk and Larkin Halls of the Civic Auditorium and, as an exciting innovation this year, at various "satellite" locations around San Francisco. Fort Mason Center will host one of these exhibitions. The mixed media show will be hung in the lobby of Building A, on view from August 1 to August 18, Monday through Saturday, 9am to 5pm. The pieces were selected by an expert jury from the many entries representing the Bay Area art community. The quality of the work submitted this year was very high indeed.

According to Frank Pietronigro, Co-Director of the Festival, the concept of satellite exhibits "will enable more San Franciscans, including over 35 jurors, to add their sensibilities, points of view and spirit to our city's Arts Festival. I was delighted with the number of jurors who were able to participate in the selection process. . . ."

BOOK LOVERS HELP FIGHT ADULT ILLITERACY

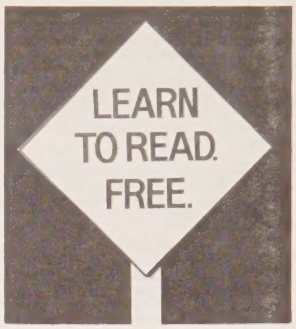
The annual book sale conducted by the Friends of the San Francisco Public Library in Pier 3 at Fort Mason Center elicits a tremendous response from the public. Book lovers are queued up long before the doors open on the first day; tens of thousands of volumes are donated, sorted and sold. Revenues generated by the sales fund a variety of worthy undertakings and special programs. The monies raised by last year's book sale were used in a particularly appropriate manner: Project Read was founded.

Project Read is an adult literacy program sponsored by the San Francisco Public Library and its "Friends," whose stated purpose is to "increase dramatically basic learning opportunities for English speaking adults who live in San Francisco." Project Read hopes to reach many of the estimated 44,000 San Franciscans who lack the basic reading and writing skills necessary to function on an everyday basis in our society.

Functional illiteracy is defined as the inability to read at a fifth grade level; this definition translates into the inability to read the label on a medicine bottle, to use a telephone directory or to address an envelope so that it will arrive at its destination.

The number of Americans who are functionally illiterate is startling. It is estimated (conservatively, many authorities believe) that one out of every five adults lacks basic reading skills. The reasons vary widely, and rather than seek to assign blame, Project Read is designed to help solve this problem.

Project Read employs a two-pronged approach: it functions as a referral agency, directing tutors and students to already existing programs; it also directly recruits volunteer tutors, trains them and then matches them with those who wish to learn to read.



When Project Read was started last autumn, there was a definite element of doubt. "We believed the numbers and we believed that there were people out there," said Olive Gamble, Coordinator of Project Read. "The question was whether, since they were getting along, potential students would respond." A media blitz involving television, radio, flyers and bus cards, largely designed and donated by the McCann-Erickson advertising agency, has proven very effective in drawing students. Gamble reports that the motivation level of Project Read's students is "incredibly high. These people really want to learn."

Although you are able to read this article, that does not mean that Project Read might not be for you. Volunteers are needed to teach adults on a one to one basis. Project Read will be starting a new tutor training program in September. For more information, call Project Read, (415) 621-READ.

RAY JASON CELEBRATES 13th YEAR

Bring a blanket, bring a picnic, bring the whole family down to Fort Mason's Pier 2, August 4 at 7pm, because San Francisco's favorite sidewalk juggler Ray Jason is having a show! It's a spectacular FREE show that marks Ray's 13th anniversary as a street performer. But more than that, it is Ray's special "way of thanking the people of S.F. for putting money in my hat and in the hats of other street performers."

The evening promises to be a showcase of talent. San Francisco's master Master of Ceremonies, Scott Beach, will introduce such performers as clown and dancer Wayne D. Doba, popular singer/songwriter Steve Seskin, the zany modern commedia E. Fratelli Bologna, and comedian-ventriloquist and star of "Sugar Babies," Ronn Lucas, to name a few. And as if that isn't enough, there's the star Ray Jason, who juggles torches blindfolded, hatchets from a unicycle, and tosses bowling balls and sickles as handily as cigar boxes and wit. Ray has had five shows at Fort Mason Center; four of those were made into local TV specials, and thousands of adoring fans attended all of them. Besides his yearly appearances at Fort Mason, Ray also performs regularly at Ghirardelli Sqaure, The Cannery, Pier 39, and—as the official juggler for the 49ers—at Candlestick Park.

But why does he do it—perform daring and sometimes ridiculous feats of comedy and danger in front of live audiences out on the streets? For Ray, it's the "challenge of performing in an exciting environment: no lights, no soundstage, in a territory littered with hecklers, drunks and other oddities. And I love succeeding in that!" But his favorite aspect of street performing is the "genuine level of affection of the people of San Francisco." And his anniversary show is his way of saying thanks.

FORT MASON CENTER UPDATE

A $5000. gift from Chevron USA has helped to launch Fort Mason Center's first annual report. This generous contribution from a long-time supporter will be used towards the printing and distribution of the publication.

Allan Temko, Architecture Critic of the S.F. Chronicle, delivered the Frederick Law Olmstead Lecture to a Conference Center audience. Mr. Temko was invited to present this lecture and slide show at Harvard earlier this year. Proceeds from ticket sales will benefit the Center's Landscape Fund.

Friends of the Fort gathered for a special Fourth of July picnic/party at the Conference Center last month.

Families unpacked fried chicken and potato salad, beginning their picnic feasts about 7pm. After a welcoming address by Executive Director Marc Kasky, traditional American melodies were sung by "The Parlor Singers," a barbershop quartet. Wonderfully colorful and creative animated films (all made by teens) were provided for viewing by Poetry Film Workshop; little ones were entertained by Andy Meyer of Children's Art Center, and by our own clown-in-residence, Dennis Blake.

Shortly after 9pm, as "The Parlor Singers" closed their set with "The Star-Spangled Banner," the Conference Center curtains were opened to reveal San Francisco's slightly foggy but always breathtaking remembrance of our country's fight for independence.

Western Public Radio has received a $102,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities, to produce a two year series on archaeology for National Public Radio satellite distribution. This series, called "Patterns of the Past," will be produced in collaboration with Dr. Brian Fagan, internationally known archaeologist at the University of California, Santa Barbara. Congratulations Leo Lee.
